GAZETTE

THE INTERNATIONAL
JOURNAL FOR COMMUNICATION STUDIES

Editor Cees J Hamelink University of Amsterdam, The Netherlands

For over four decades, Gazette has published wide-ranging scholarly articles from the international community of communication scholars.

From February 1997 Gazette will be under the leadership of a new Editor, a new Editorial Advisory Board, and a new publisher, SAGE Publications and will now focus on:

- the role of communication in world politics and world trade and the contribution of communication to international understanding, peace and security
- the interaction between communication and development processes
- the legal, social and ethical implications of new information and communication technologies
- the theories and techniques of communication policy formation and communication planning
- the development of normative theories in the communications field under the conditions of cultural pluralism
- the implications of international human rights standards for the field of communications
